Methods of Instruction

The College delivers classes in a variety of modes beyond the traditional classroom setting. The alternative delivery is conveyed by the “classroom” listed for that class, as viewed online at Class Availability.

Internet classes are those where course materials and assignments are conducted over the Internet, denoted with WWW.

Hawaiʻi Interactive Television System (HITS) enables live interaction among classrooms in Hāna, Kahului, Lahaina, Lānaʻi, Molokaʻi, and throughout the state via closed-circuit television.

Cable classes are broadcast over the College channel to Spectrum digital cable subscribers.

Hybrid-Technology Intensive (HTI) courses make intensive use of online and offline technologies to such an extent that the schedule of class meetings is altered. The HTI designation may apply to campus-based course or to a distance learning course for which distant students can participate in scheduled meetings either off-site or via interactive video technologies.
